KENTUCKY REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

We are opposed to the free and unlimited currency of silver, believing that it would involve the country in financial ruin. We believe in sound currency, and in the honest use of the coinage system, provided that a dollar in one is made precisely as reliable as a dollar in our own case.

There is no other one thing to which we are more indebted for our National welfare and progress than the Homestead Laws. That great measure of practical beneficence gave more homes to homeless people than all the rest the influences at work in that direction during all the preceding history of the country. It provided an opportunity for which tens of thousands were longing; it helped the poor and hard-working by enabling them to help themselves. We are too apt to forget that in the absence of this incentive and assistance the settlement of the new West would have been indefinitely postponed. It was the Republican Homestead Law above everything else that caused immigration to go beyond the Mississippi and the Missouri, and to fill the waste places with productiveness and all the means of comfort and enjoyment. The Government was an immense gainer by the policy which thus increased the sources of its prosperity and strengthened the devotion of the people to its principles and institutions.

A vast addition was made to the homes of the country in a comparatively short time, and with the homes came churches, schools, newspapers, railroads and all the other advantages that have contributed so much to our aggregate happiness and greatness. The historians of the future will not fail to dwell upon the importance of this movement and to praise the wisdom which made it possible.

The great reduction in the price of sterling silver has compelled us to pay more for the labor of a home market to the products of our country, and to increase the cost of production, and to retard the re-establishment of the doctrine of reciprocity. We believe that such a system will defray every Government expense, gradually liquidate all debts, render public confidence in the value of the dollar, and bring about a permanent concordance among the states concerning the currency. In view of the past financial history of the Democratic party, its devotion to the old state bank system and wildcat banking, we believe that the Republicans party can be safely relied upon to regulate the monetary system of the Nation.

We favor an American policy which will protect American and American interests in any part of the world at all hazards and will sympathize with struggling Republics rather than ignorant monarchies.

Uncle Sam's Shortage.

The deficit in the National Treasury for the present fiscal year—from July 1st to date—is $4,209,277.24.

SOMETHING of a sensation was created in Washington by the withdrawal of $4,500,000 in gold at New York Saturday for shipment to Europe. No need for a "sensation" over a little thing like that; it is simply the result of the present Democratic Free-trade policy, and just what the Republicans assured the American people would happen as soon as the Democratic program was put into effect.

The silliness of the Free-trade had ought to be apparent to even the most obtuse, after witnessing its practical operations. Already it has resulted in two bond issues and a gaping wound in the Treasury surplus. In fact, the surplus has vanished, and in its place we have an appalling deficit. The amount of the exports of gold during the last twenty months is unprecedented. Since January 1st of last year the gold coin and bullion exported from the United States aggregate about $169,284,300, while the imports during the same period amount to only $48,815,500, which leaves the excess of exports over imports about $120,470,800. What a beautiful record the Democratic Free-trade founders are making, to be sure!

"The greatest thing for a country," exclaims Colonel INGERSOLL, "is for all of its citizens to have a home;" and in this respect our own country is to be regarded as the greatest in the world. Our people have what may be called the fireside instinct in a larger degree than those of any other Nation. They are pre-eminently home-makers, and the proportion of them who own homes is in excess of that known elsewhere. The history of the country from the first is the story of a constant struggle for the ownership of land and the multiplication of family hearthstones. This purpose has been the controlling one in the work of subduing the wilderness and extending the sway of civilization between the Atlantic and the Pacific. The log cabins of the earliest settlers represented the inspiration which was to insure the development of our unprecedented resources and the winning of a surpassing order of prosperity. Whenever American courage, industry and fortitude have been manifested, there have homes been established, and the domestic virtues nourished and encouraged. It is true, as Colonel INGERSOLL says, that patriotism of the best sort is always found where such conditions exist. Those who are proprietors of a country are sure to love it, and to hasten to its defense in a time of peril, as has been so grandly illustrated in our own case.

There is no other one thing to which we are more indebted for our National welfare and progress than the Homestead Laws. That great measure of practical beneficence gave more homes to homeless people than all the rest the influences at work in that direction during all the preceding history of the country. It provided an opportunity for which tens of thousands were longing; it helped the poor and hard-working by enabling them to help themselves.
